The Role of the Residents Association

Definition: A Residents Council is a group of concerned citizens who are elected to represent the housing community in which the residents live. The Council is the voice in the community. It strives to make the housing community a better place to live by actively seeking to influence decisions that directly affect the residents it serves.

To do this effectively, it acts as a liaison between management and residents, and residents and the community. A very important part of every residents’ councils’ efforts should be devoted to programming or activities. Residents’ Councils develop and carry out programs which they feel will improve the social, economic and/or political status of their constituency.
Why Have a Resident Organization?

According to HUD, a resident organization can be a highly structured resident council or a simple social club. It is a group of residents in a housing development who join together to fulfill common needs and to accomplish specific goals.

The organization can help to: Enhance the quality of life in the housing development. Plan the future of the community. Resolve community problems. A resident organization can be a benefit to both residents and management.

How to Create and Maintain an Effective Residents Association

1. Set realistic goals based on the overall abilities and interests of the residents.
2. Maintain and follow a set of by-laws.
3. Establish a working relationship with management.
4. Involve residents in the life of the housing community.
5. Inform the residents about issues affecting them.
6. Influence decisions affecting the life of the residents.
7. Resolve problems or grievances among and between residents.
8. Share resident concerns – both positive and negative.
9. Provide an advocacy role on behalf of older adult issues.
10. Welcome new residents and provide resident orientation.
12. Avoiding conflicts of interest and petty personality feuds.
13. Be transparent and run efficient meetings where all feel they have a voice.
How can the Residents Association help in the following situation?

Residents are complaining that the washers & dryers are always in use during the hours the laundry room is open. It seems there are not enough washers and dryers in the laundry room, but there is no room to add more washers and dryers. Is there a role for the Residents Association to find a solution to the problem?
Can the Residents Association get involved in starting a recycling program?

Is this an appropriate role for the Residents Association?

If the answer is yes, what steps should the Association take to create a recycling program in the building?
Residents of HUD-assisted multifamily housing developments have the right to:

- Organize as residents without obstruction, harassment, or retaliation from property owners or management.
- Post materials in common areas and provide leaflets informing other residents of their rights and of opportunities to involve themselves in their project.
- Use appropriate common space or meeting facilities to organize or to consider any issue affecting the condition or management of the property.
- Meet without the owner/manager present.
- Be recognized by property owners and managers as having a voice in residential community affairs.
Residents that have signed a lease with the owner and the property management company of the building. By signing the lease, the resident, the owner and the management company have entered into a legal, enforceable contract. Caregivers would not be considered a member of the Residents Association.

Would a resident employed part time by management be eligible to be a member of the Residents Association?

If the person qualified by age (62 or older) and by income limit, has signed a lease with management, and must abide by the lease and house rules, the answer most likely is yes. Especially if the resident became a part-time employee of the building after qualifying and moving into the building.

If a building staff member, for example a maintenance person, is hired and as a condition of employment is required to live on site, the answer is no.
A resident has been telling management staff about discussions and building complaints addressed at the Residents Association meetings. What are some solutions for this problem?

Reinforce that the Residents Association is a benefit for residents & is a voice in the community for all residents.

What is discussed in the meetings is to be kept in the meeting.

The officers of the Residents Association should have a standing meeting with Management to bring to their attention issues/complaints on behalf of the residents.

CSS staff training for on-site staff emphasizes a regular channel of communication between the Residents Association and Management—ex: standing meeting, and mutual respect between the RA and Management. This is a partnership. Management can go to the RA if there is a building wide-problem they need help solving, and vice versa.
1. Set realistic goals based on the overall abilities and interests of the residents.
2. Maintain and follow a set of by-laws.
3. Establish a working relationship with management.
4. Involve residents in the life of the housing community.
5. Inform the residents about issues affecting them.
6. Influence decisions affecting the life of the residents.
7. Resolve problems or grievances among and between residents.
8. Share resident concerns – both positive and negative.
9. Provide an advocacy role on behalf of older adult issues.
10. Welcome new residents and provide resident orientation.
12. Avoiding conflicts of interest and petty personality feuds
13. Be transparent and run efficient meetings where all feel they have a voice.
By-laws should include:
• Name of the resident organization
• Purpose of the organization
• Membership who is eligible, how are members selected?
• Officers number, duties, terms of office, nomination, and election procedures
• Committees number and duties, procedures for setting up ad hoc committees
• Finances, accounting and auditing procedures
• Meetings: When, how often, who attends?
• Quorum percentage of members needed to pass a vote
• Amendments procedures for changing by-laws

Although they may seem complex, the details are intended to avoid many predictable questions or problems that simple by-laws often do not address. In the long run these by-laws may avoid arguments, misunderstandings, and amendments.

On a scale of 1 to 10 how much would you be interested in:

- an all Polka night
- a Sing-along night
- a small Chamber Music group
- a Bluegrass group
- an all Show tunes show
- a Karaoke night
- an all Country/Western music
- Latin music
- Classical Music

Is there any kind of entertainment that we have not had (or haven't had for a while) that you would like to recommend?

On that same scale of 1 to 10 how much would you be interested in:

- An afternoon tea (or coffee) with cookies.
- A tenant's fashion show — Wear the dress you don't get the chance to wear.
- A make your own ice cream sundae party.
- A white elephant sale (B'nai B'rith residents only)
- A Christmas in July sale.
- A box lunch social (in warmer weather).

Is there any kind of event that we haven't had (or not for a while) that you would like to recommend?

How can I, as a tenant, use my gifts and talents to benefit the B'nai B'rith community?
